

Sensitive Dinos

A social story for families visiting the exhibition Dinosaur Explore: Lost Creature of the Cretaceous with children who find heightened sensory environments challenging.

The exhibition Dinosaur Explore: Lost Creature of the Cretaceous is showing at the Museum of the Goldfields.

This is what the Museum looks like from the outside.

When I arrive inside the building, I might have to wait by the entrance while an adult buys the tickets.

If I want to, I can have a look at the big dinosaur egg at the front, I can even go inside it!

As I walk in, I am welcome to grab a dinosaur tail and tie it around my waist.

There might be other children in the exhibition, I am welcome to bring my own earmuffs should it get noisy.

This is what the entrance of the exhibition looks like. As I walk inside the exhibition, I will see big dinosaurs.

The dinosaurs will be moving their head, tails, arms, open their mouth and eyes as I walk past but they won't be making any noise.

There will be different colour lights around the exhibition.

There are 3 iPads I can play with, a quiet mat area and 2 tables with colouring in material.

When I'm ready to leave, I can remove the tail and walk to the front entrance with my family/guardian.

Thank you for visiting the Museum of the Goldfields, we hope you had a ROARING good time!
