WRECK OF THE "EGLINTON"
On Monday morning last, an express from Fremantle, which arrived about 10 o'clock, brought intelligence of the total wreck of the long expected barque Eglington, from London and the Cape, on the coast abreast of lake Nowergoop, about 28 miles north of Perth. The information was conveyed to Fremantle by Mr Henderson, brother of the Comptroller-General, who, accompanied by the mate and one of the crew, left the scene of the disaster on Sunday morning, and kept on in twenty-four hours, a feat which, when the nature of the travelling and the previous privation they had undergone considered, must be taken as a praiseworthy instance of determination and perseverance. Immediately upon arrival of the intelligence, every exertion was made at Fremantle to dispatch a steamer, and three or four boats reached the wreck the same afternoon, but were unable to hold any communication with the vessel until the following morning. From a detachment of the 90th Regt., Lieut. Elliot, marched about 1 under the guidance of a native. Distance from Perth, being much less than it really was, a party of gentlemen also proceeded. The Eglington, a barque of register, had left the Cape on July, and on Friday afternoon, after consulting his his passengers they would see the following morning, and shortened sail. There had the evening a young lady, or sojourners, and about a quarter party in the cabin were at the head of a breaker's head, at the stern of the ship, who heavily fell before the wind, bound our coast, carry on her, but happily she was seen, and hurried forward about a mile from the land, again struck and her head out of water, and the water on Tuesday, and back on Tuesday, after parts were only thrown. We regret after she had struck her bows, but the passengers were saved, and the ship was blown to pieces.
